

Dispute Resolution Hotline

March 27, 2015

BOMBAY HIGH COURT SETS ASIDE SEBI'S FIRST ORDER OF IMPRISONMENT AS ARBITRARY AND ILLEGAL

Bombay High Court

- Mode of arrest and detention is a drastic step which infringes upon personal liberty and so has to be in strict compliance with established procedure.
- In an absence of a finding that a person had the means to pay, mere non-payment of dues does not constitute neglect or refusal to pay the penalty.
- Sets out certain situations where an alternate remedy would not serve as an absolute bar for a writ court to entertain a petition.

INTRODUCTION

The Bombay High Court (“Court”) in the case of Vinod Hingorani (“Petitioner”) v The Securities & Exchange Board of India<sup>1</sup> (“SEBI”) has, in very clear terms, expounded upon the powers of arrest and detention of a Recovery Officer of SEBI, under the provisions of the SEBI Act, 1992 (“SEBI Act”) read with the Income Tax Act, 1961 (“IT Act”). The Court has set aside an order passed by a Recovery Officer of SEBI committing an individual defaulter, Mr. Vinod Hingorani, to civil imprisonment for a period of six months or until the dues are paid, for defaulting on payment of monetary penalty imposed on him by SEBI in the past.

FACTS

The facts of the case have been dealt with in detail in our earlier hotline on SEBI's order (see here), which was challenged before the Bombay High Court.

CONTENTIONS

The Petitioner contended that the Order of the Recovery Officer was illegal for want of compliance of pre requisites stipulated under Rule 73 of Part V of Schedule II of the IT Act. The Petitioner also argued that the Recovery Officer had not recorded in writing the reasons for satisfaction pertaining to compliance of the pre requisites. The Petitioner submitted that the order of detention was arbitrary and illegal and was in violation of the principles of natural justice.

SEBI argued that the writ was not maintainable as the Petitioner had an alternate remedy of approaching the Securities Appellate Tribunal. Defending the order, SEBI argued that several opportunities had been granted to the defaulter to repay his dues, which remained outstanding and the Petitioner had not challenged the order of penalty, which had attained finality. SEBI was unable to trace any substantial sum of money belonging to the Petitioner and so the situation necessitated exercise of the powers of arrest and detention.

JUDGMENT

Alternate Efficacious Remedy

The Court observed<sup>2</sup> that it was a well settled principle of law that the existence of an alternate remedy would not serve as an absolute bar for not exercising writ jurisdiction. Relying on a host of judgments passed by the Supreme Court, the Court observed that even if an alternate remedy existed, a writ petition can be entertained in the following circumstances:

- If there has been a violation of natural justice.
- If a procedure required for a decision has not been adopted.
- If there has been an infringement of fundamental rights.
- If the orders or proceedings are wholly without jurisdiction.
- If the virus of an Act is challenged.
- If it can be shown that forcing the petitioner to adopt other procedures would result in palpable injustice.

The Court went on to hold that the writ was maintainable as the petitioner had alleged that he had been detained in an arbitrary and illegal manner without following due process, which was a violation of his fundamental rights.

Power of Arrest and Detention

The Court observed that the Petitioner had failed to challenge the order of the adjudicating authority of SEBI levying a penalty on the Petitioner for an amount of about INR 11 million (approximately USD 175,000). This had prompted SEBI to initiate recovery proceedings under Section 28A of the SEBI Act, wherein the Recovery Officer of SEBI has

Research Papers

The Tour d'Horizon of Data Law Implications of Digital Twins

May 29, 2025

Global Capability Centers

May 27, 2025

Fintech

May 05, 2025

Research Articles

2025 Watchlist: Life Sciences Sector India

April 04, 2025

Re-Evaluating Press Note 3 Of 2020: Should India's Land Borders Still Define Foreign Investment Boundaries?

February 04, 2025

INDIA 2025: The Emerging Powerhouse for Private Equity and M&A Deals

January 15, 2025

Audio

CCI's Deal Value Test

February 22, 2025

Securities Market Regulator's Continued Quest Against “Unfiltered” Financial Advice

December 18, 2024

Digital Lending - Part 1 - What's New with NBFC P2Ps

November 19, 2024

NDA Connect

Connect with us at events, conferences and seminars.

NDA Hotline

Click here to view Hotline archives.

Video

Vyapak Desai speaking on the danger of deepfakes | Legally Speaking with Tarun Nangia | NewsX

April 01, 2025

the power to order the arrest of a person when he fails to pay the penalty imposed by an adjudicating officer.

The Court, agreeing with the contentions of the Petitioner, observed that a recovery officer has to resort to the mode of arrest and detention as prescribed in the IT Act. The Court stated that Rule 73 conferred the power of arrest and detention only in two situations i.e. (i) when the defaulter transfers property with the object and intention of obstructing the execution of a certificate of demand issued on him; and (ii) despite having the means, the defaulter refuses or neglects to pay the dues. Further Rule 73 also makes it mandatory for the recovery officer to record in writing the reasons for his satisfaction with regard to compliance with the pre requisites.

In the instant case, the recovery officer had failed to record, in writing, the reasons for satisfaction with regard to the existence of the two aforementioned situations under Rule 73. The recovery officer had failed to provide the petitioner a reasonable opportunity to defend himself as stipulated under Rule 74, which was in violation of the principles of natural justice. The Court observed that the recovery officer could not have ordered the arrest or detention of the petitioner solely on the ground that he was unable to pay the amount or give a proposal of repayment. Relying on the judgment of the Supreme Court in Jolly George Vargese v Bank of Cochín<sup>3</sup>, the Court held that mere non-payment of dues does not amount to neglect or refusal to pay. The operative condition would be the failure to take steps to pay an amount due in spite of having the capacity to do so.

The Court concluded by stating that the order of arrest without following due process was sheer abuse of power and was arbitrary and illegal. The Court ordered the release of the Petitioner and remitted the matter back to the recovery officer with directions to decide it afresh in accordance with the provisions of law.

ANALYSIS

The new found power of SEBI to order the arrest and detention of a defaulter is a drastic step that should be invoked only when due process has been followed and the pre requisites of passing such an order have been complied with strictly. The recovery officer should record the reasons of satisfaction in writing while passing such an order; these are checks and balances which are required in order to provide a defaulter a fair opportunity of defense.

The power to order arrest and detention of a defaulter were introduced in order to provide SEBI with additional investigative and sanctioning powers and to enable SEBI to fulfill its role and purpose as an effective securities market regulator. In recent times, there have been several enactments which provide for imposition of criminal liability. These enactments have conferred the power of adjudication and imposition of liability on quasi-judicial bodies. The decision of the Court is welcome and is a step in the right direction. It will work to keep a check on compliance with the due process of law before resorting to imprison/detain an alleged offender.

The Court has, interestingly, remitted the matter back to the tax recovery officer for a fresh hearing in a time bound manner. The Court also considered the apprehension that the Petitioner was a flight risk by ordering that the Petitioner would not leave India during the pendency of proceedings before the tax recovery officer and that the economic offences wing would not return the Petitioner's passport during the pendency of proceedings before the tax recovery officer.

– Arjun Gupta, Sahil Kanuga & Vyapak Desai

You can direct your queries or comments to the authors

---

<sup>1</sup> Writ Petition No 639 of 2015

<sup>2</sup> Relying on State of H.P. and Ors. v Gujarat Ambuja Cement Ltd. And Anr - AIR 2005 SC 3936

<sup>3</sup> AIR 1980 470

---

DISCLAIMER

The contents of this hotline should not be construed as legal opinion. View detailed disclaimer.

This Hotline provides general information existing at the time of preparation. The Hotline is intended as a news update and Nishith Desai Associates neither assumes nor accepts any responsibility for any loss arising to any person acting or refraining from acting as a result of any material contained in this Hotline. It is recommended that professional advice be taken based on the specific facts and circumstances. This Hotline does not substitute the need to refer to the original pronouncements.

This is not a Spam mail. You have received this mail because you have either requested for it or someone must have suggested your name. Since India has no anti-spamming law, we refer to the US directive, which states that a mail cannot be considered Spam if it contains the sender's contact information, which this mail does. In case this mail doesn't concern you, please unsubscribe from mailing list.